1	I have greatly enjoyed the debates between professors on points of disagreement.	Sep 7, 2011 8:54 PM
3	The question and answer periods are fascinating, but too short. I would love to see more time allocated to audience discussion. [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 4:01 PM
4	I find it hard to avoid the impression that the use of multiple simultaneous digital discussion tools has the effect of entirely eliminating the law students from the live discussion. That is not necessarily a complete bad, but it is certainly segregating.	Sep 7, 2011 3:59 PM
5	Why does everyone call William Fisher "Terry"?	Sep 7, 2011 3:58 PM
6	Great programming!	Sep 7, 2011 3:58 PM
7	This has been magnificent so far.	Sep 7, 2011 3:56 PM
8	Sometimes the discussions do not give the audience a foothold to participate - throw us a ladder.	Sep 7, 2011 3:55 PM
9	the depth and breadth of knowledge in the room is both exciting yet somewhat intimidating.	Sep 7, 2011 3:54 PM
10	There are a number of attempts at protecting privacy on the internet however, I am concerned that like the Big brother in George Orwell's Nineteen Eighty Four, a tyrannical ruler in any jurisdiction could make use of a number of the internet applications and various technological devices as a means of surveillance. With the number of bloggers that have been detained in various countries, the possibility of the internet contributing to the antics of a dictator is made more real. Can we imagine what Hitler could have done with information as the	Sep 7, 2011 3:54 PM internet now provides today?

11	It is a pleasure to be here and be engaged	Sep 7, 2011 3:54 PM
12	The live question tool seems to produce better Ideas than what I have seen on twitter. A function of length limit?	Sep 7, 2011 3:54 PM
13	overall a great week so far.	Sep 7, 2011 3:54 PM
14	I really appreciate this opportunity. I have done a lot of work on the Internet--even provided technical consultations. Simultaneously, I have done a lot of reading and "hobby research" on many of the topics in iLaw, so it's great to expand that knowledge in an academic environment.	Sep 7, 2011 3:53 PM
15	I love this program so far; I think it's done a fantastic job of raising important questions, and looking at a variety of ways to answer them. I'm a big fan of the classes interactive features, although I'd still like to see if there's more ways to have student questions/thoughts/ideas interact with and shape the discussions.	Sep 7, 2011 3:53 PM
16	I believe that the topics are really interesting and I really appreciate the specific recommended readings that close the scope of discussion to a defined topic	Sep 7, 2011 3:53 PM
17	pls host an iLaw every year!	Sep 7, 2011 3:53 PM
18	Well. Thanks.	Sep 7, 2011 3:53 PM
19	At this point, only thanks. Looking fwd to poker.	Sep 7, 2011 3:52 PM
20	more interactive, calling on audience members (including faculty, special guests, students)	Sep 7, 2011 3:52 PM
21	Along the same lines - there are experts in all sorts of fields here, and I am not one of them. I enjoy the back and forth between the professors very much, but often get a bit lost. Perhaps there could be a little bit more explanation about more intricate parts of the discussions? I am taking this as a bit of a "primer" and sometimes I feel like I can't pick up any of it because it's over my head. [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 3:52 PM
22	Save for Burkett's and Nagla's presentation, the approach seems very US-centric and which seems to be a shame as we have gathered participants from all over the world. It would have been very insightful to have heard as to the manner in which net control is being perpetuated and in what ways legal challenges have managed to overcome such attempts. [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 3:52 PM
23	I have greatly enjoyed hearing a variety of Berkman-affiliated professors speak.	Sep 7, 2011 3:52 PM
24	I feel that thee were too many topics for discussion and not enough time to cover more deeply some of them	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
25	hi!	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
26	It'd be nice to have some presentation give a small description of what role private law firms have been playing in all of these contentious cyberlaw issues. We've heard a lot about governments, universities, independent activist groups, non-legal corporations, etc. But we haven't heard much of how the business of law is begin affected by this type of litigation and regulation. Who are firms	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM clients now? What conflict of interest issues might arise for firms? Is this a profit center for firms, or are these issues largely being ignored by the private sector?

27	Awesome class! Very interesting speakers and format, and the social media support helps us to engage in the discussion.	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
28	It would be great if, in addition to the reading material, we were provided an outline of core law with respect to each topic.	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
29	How does talk become action? What are the three major problems that we see in the Internet world following iLaw, and what the heck are we going to do about them?	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
30	It would be nice to see more law at iLaw.	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
31	This is great fun. I particularly like the debates.	Sep 7, 2011 3:51 PM
32	I am very thankful to you all for doing this. Not enough opportunities at this law school permit students to witness such bold inquiry and cooperation among so many professors.	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
33	Were you proposing poker instead of, or in addition to, the dinners tomorrow night? [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
34	Today I looked up at one point, while the lights were dimmed, and noticed that nearly everyone was staring down at a computer. I found that, while Professor Burkert was speaking, to be slightly weird. Our computers were all like extensions of our brains or, more appropriately, our vocal chords. But all in silence. Can we explore somewhat, where humanity crosses with technology? What is it to be human and craving discussion, social interaction, debate, and yet to be doing it on multiple layers, online, before glowing screens, amidst a concurrent "real" human interaction playing out just passed those screens. I think it enriches this class, but I'm wary about its implications for everyday life. [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
35	Thank you very much for this program. It's been a wonderful experience, and I've greatly enjoyed both the online tools and diversity of perspective.	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
36	the sessions are a bit too long, especially today (wednesday), and lunch was too late in the day and awkwardly spaced. by the end of the day, although the material remains extremely interesting, it becomes increasingly difficult to absorb such a large amount of information.	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
37	I would like to get the perspective of industry incumbents on issues like open systems. The discussion we had yesterday felt one-sided, and for someone who is new to these issues, I think more diverse perspectives would have been helpful.	Sep 7, 2011 3:50 PM
38	is it possible to make future ilaws include/invite more people from different parts of the World?	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM
39	In general, this class is being taught on a high level while, which fun to watch, can at times go over the heads of people not well versed in cyberlaw.	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM
40	I hope that before the end of the course, participants will have the opportunity to contribute to the ever relevant discourses	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM

41	So far, a fascinating discussion; grateful for the interdisciplinary approach.	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM
42	This is really very fun.	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM
43	a logistical plea: please stick to a clear schedule; it is very helpful to know when sessions will begin and end, and very disruptive when the schedule is not followed, as some of us plan external commitments based on the published iLaw schedule.	Sep 7, 2011 3:49 PM
44	i wonder if the twitter+chat+questiontool distract and detract more than they contribute. should say though: this seminar (and sharing between the brilliant minds herein) is EXTRAORDINARY!	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
45	I feel like the discourse has been between professors, academics, foreign scholars, professionals, etc., but relatively little from the students actually taking the course. If we are to be relegated to a question tool, I think we ought to go to it more often than we are. [suggestions]	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
46	I'm currently having the most exciting experience related to cyberlaw discussion/study/learning that I've ever had in my life. Thank you Berkman Center and HLS!	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
47	It would be good if the events could somehow be spaced out more. Maybe somehow get a five day week next time around so we could have more down time to digest, decompress, and mingle more informally.	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
48	Some of the discussions can occasionally become derailed by the experts, and become a little too detailed with unfamiliar topics. A broader level of generality could be helpful, although the discussions between faculty are fantastic.	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
49	This has been a phenomenal experience so far. I would love for iLaw to continue in this format so others can experience it next year.	Sep 7, 2011 3:48 PM
50	I think it's a shame that lawyers don't ever deal with good methodology. Methodology determines so much of knowledge derived from real life. are cases really all we get?	Sep 7, 2011 3:46 PM
51	i've loved hearing the berkman people interact.	Sep 7, 2011 3:46 PM
52	need more interaction between us & speakers - better in JP's sessions than others	Sep 7, 2011 3:45 PM
53	Logistical concerns-- I've been a bit uncomfortable with the long sessions and warm/stuffy room. I think keeping to the breaks and regulating the air conditioning would be helpful!	Sep 7, 2011 3:45 PM
54	Need to know how I'll be participating (I selected the video/editing option) and whether I need to be recording during the session.	Sep 7, 2011 3:44 PM
55	This has been great!	Sep 7, 2011 3:44 PM
56	Fantastic course. Really appreciate the chance to participate in it.	Sep 7, 2011 3:44 PM
57	Thank you for organizing this amazing program!	Sep 7, 2011 3:44 PM
58	you're the best!	Sep 7, 2011 3:43 PM
